BOSTON--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Jul. 18, 2024-- American Tower Corporation (NYSE: AMT) today announced the release of its 2023 sustainability executive report and accompanying indices and supplements, which outline the Company's sustainability strategy and provide a comprehensive overview of the progress made across the three pillars of its program—Environment, Social and Governance.

"At American Tower, we seek to embed sustainability into our core operations," said Steve Vondran, American Tower's President and Chief Executive Officer. "In 2023, we further reduced our greenhouse gas emissions, largely due to the continued success of our Power-as-a-Service program. This initiative focuses on renewable energy generation, energy efficiency and advanced energy storage systems, and has played a crucial role in bolstering our environmental efforts. Additionally, our growing Digital Communities program has enhanced education, healthcare access and financial literacy in underserved markets. I'm proud of our employees' commitment to supporting our stakeholders while making a positive global impact."

The report highlights the Company's sustainability progress including:

- Achieved continued reduction in combined scope 1 and 2 GHG emissions
- Increased on-site renewable energy generation by 40% globally, growing capacity from 87 megawatts (MW) to approximately 120 MW across over 18,000 sites, producing more than 100 gigawatt hours of clean energy
